

Lake City Floodplain Park

The City of Seattle has acquired a property in Lake City on Thornton Creek to create a community green space that supports a healthier Thornton Creek. In order to make this a natural area that serves community needs, we need to hear your hopes and dreams for both the neighborhood and the upcoming Lake City Floodplain Park.

Join Seattle Parks and Recreation, Seattle Public Utilities, and Mid Sound Fisheries Enhancement Group in a series of virtual workshops. In this first workshop, we will introduce the project, share what the City of Seattle has learned about the project site, and learn about community needs for the neighborhood and dreams for the site from you. You can also provide online feedback any time at lakecityfloodplainpark.com.
